JUNE 2009

Digital TV: Cleaning up the mess!

June 12, 2009 was the new date established by the US Congress for all TV stations in the country to terminate their analog transmission and consolidate a digital TV system in the entire country.

Originally, February 17, 2009 had been established by the same Congress authority at a first delay from the previous May 2007 deadline written in the Telecommunications Act of 1997.

After so much confusion we now expect to achieve a digital consolidation on the way television waves reach out to millions of households throughout the country.

KMBH made its switch to a digital-only transmission on February 17, 2009 in accordance with the original plans of the first delay. We could not wait any longer because a dual transmission (analog/digital) for five years had completely drained our finances and had crippled our ability to continue to serve you and your family.

We now expect all the other channels in our area to follow on June 12, 2009 by shutting down their analog channels and consolidating their digital transmission.

Under a lack of reliable statistics we go by perception. It is our perception that most viewers who depend on over-the-air television in the Rio Grande Valley are ready to go digital TV only, but are confused regarding their sets and devices shifting from analog to digital and viceversa. The penetration of Mexican TV channels in our area creates another deal of confusion because Mexican TV has no digital transition timeline.

Viewers who subscribe to Cable are getting also into a messy situation. So far our signal has been provided by Cable 10 on the analog system, but Time Warner is implementing a digital cable system with an increased channel capacity.

Some cable viewers can already watch KMBH 38.1 (primary PBS programming) on Digital Cable 881 and KMBH 38.2 (V-me programming) on Digital Cable 882.

Viewers of the analog cable system should request Time Warner to make room for our secondary channel 38.2 with V-me programming, which is a great educational and entertainment service in Spanish language.

Have a Happy & Safe Summer!

"How did it get so late so soon? Its night before its afternoon. December is here before its June. My goodness how the time has flown. How did it get so late so soon?"-Dr. Seuss

Monday 11am and 10pm

Bill McGlaughlin hosts 13 terrific broadcasts each year from our backstage studios here in the marble- and mosaic-filled Thomas Jefferson Building Washington, DC.

The Library of Congress is not only the world's largest repository of knowledge and creativity, but a distinguished presenter of the performing arts-onsite and on the air.

Since 1925, our historic Coolidge Auditorium has been home to three generations of now-legendary artists, including Leonard Bernstein, Leopold Stokowski, the Juilliard String Quartet, Stephen Sondheim, Joshua Bell, Leontyne Price, the Beaux Arts Trio, and many, many more. Aaron Copland's iconic Appalachian Spring was premiered here in 1944.

«The Loh Down on Science»

For you and/or the kids this summer!

Monday thru Friday 10am

Writer/performer/musician/humorist Sandra Tsing Loh, the host of the «Loh Down on Science» was born for this job...it marries her hard-earned bachelor's degree in physics from Caltech.

The «Loh Down on Science» is the fun way to get your daily dose of science in less than two minutes. The program explains the world of science with a dash of humor.

Hosted by writer/performer and Caltech alumna Sandra Tsing Loh, it's a program for those who love science as well as for those who avoid it!

The «Loh Down on Science» airs Monday through Friday on more than 100 radio stations throughout the U.S. And it is heard, via the Armed Forces Radio Network, in more than 179 countries throughout the world.

Ready To Learn

Ready To Learn and Preschoolers

Each child is unique and develops at his/her own pace, a challenge families and caregivers are constantly juggling. However, generalizations can be made about the ages and patterns in which children acquire skills.

There's a Big World Out There

For the growing preschooler, friendships begin to bloom starting with the extended family to include family friends and childcare pals. Selfishness begins to give way to cooperation and sharing. The child's social awareness shifts from the family to the outside world: from neighborhoods to routine social settings (preschool, the park), the world is seen as a larger place.

! Talk about the friendships you see on TV. Ask, «Tell me why Bert and Ernie are good friends.»

! TV and storybooks can offer important lessons about how the words we choose can make others feel.

! Talk about what your children would do in the situations they see on television or read about in a storybook. PBS programs carry important messages about friendship-making skills.

I Can Do It Myself

Preschoolers develop a sense of time as well as a sense of themselves as people, with their own names, ages, addresses, and unique families.

Problemsolving skills and reasoning skills begin to grow. Preschoolers are rapidly developing more of an awareness of their environment and a sense of who they are.

! Encourage your child to describe the things s/he sees on TV and in storybooks. Ask questions, for instance, «Why is it like that? Is that how we do it in our home/family?»

! This is an age of tall tales as the preschooler's imagination dominates play experiences. Pretend playmates as well as talking to oneself are common. Provide plenty of “free play” time for your preschooler.

! Television can open up a world of discovery that might not be readily accessible in your community, like a trip to the beach or a bakery. Draw pictures of and describe the tours of the places, factories, and farms you see on PBS.

Talking Back to the Television

Vocabulary grows from 1,500 to 2,500 words between the ages of 3 and 5. Early reading centers around the rhythm of language, environmental print, letter and sound play, and a rich climate of stories, books, songs, poetry, fingerplays, and print.

! Encourage and demonstrate talking back to the TV. For example, “Where do you think he left his book?» But also encourage active listening and watching-saving questions for when a TV program or storybook is over.

! After viewing, play guessing games or make rhymes about the subject matter from a TV show.

! Create stories about what could have happened, for example, “What if Arthur had gotten on the wrong bus to go to his karate lesson?»

Let's Get Up and Do It, Too!

For the growing preschooler, self-control and judgment still haven't caught up with his/her physical skills. However, the preschooler becomes quite an athlete through explorations with muscle play, motion, force, and movement. Balancing, hopping on one foot, tiptoeing, and catching large objects are now part of their skill set.

! Don't forget, children learn best through play.

! Before or after viewing, use movement games, balancing acts, and ball activities to increase coordination and body awareness.

! Select TV programs that incorporate plenty of hopping, skipping, dancing, and clapping. Seeing the characters they identify with engaging in active movement can give children the confidence to join in.

Ideas for Building Strong Minds and Muscles

Caregivers of preschoolers can build growing minds through: ! Language and musical activities: conversations, stories, songs, rhymes, and instruments; ! Exploration, indoors and out;

! Sharing and looking at stories and poems, dramatic play activities;

! Creative expression through drawing, playing instruments, and singing;

! Outings to zoos, children's museums, parks, puppet shows, storytelling events, etc.; and, ! Basic problem solving activities using tools, cooking ingredients, measuring devices, clay, blocks, water, and sand.
